

Sally Gallot Reeves to be Featured on CUTV News Radio

MADBURY, NEW HAMPSHIRE, UNITED STATES, April 27, 2018

/EINPresswire.com/ -- During her long nursing career, which included direct patient care, unit leadership and service line management, Sally Gallot Reeves discovered her truest calling! She had a knack for bringing a clinical perspective to new purchases, construction and mobile communication solutions across the hospital, as well as analyzing the elements and stages of a project. This led to her to focus on project management, and to acquire her Certification.

Sally also realized she had another gift, one that is about people: that she could keep all types and levels of personnel united for a common goal; helping them to realize and take pride in their individual strengths. Sally was also great at inspiring confidence and getting teams to move things forward.

While managing new smartphone communication projects, Sally would analyze factors like: Nurse to Physician communication, Secure Texting solutions, Care Team collaboration, and the ability to achieve Quality Measures. She also helped assess costs and how to integrate processes. She was so good at it that soon other hospitals began to seek out her project management advice.

About four years ago Sally turned her talents into a business. Her consulting company is called Connect the Dots. It's an ideal name for a service that brings all the elements together and helps complete the bigger picture. Sally supports clients through all the stages of a project, from planning to process integration and post-implementation evaluation, ensuring things are completed to time and budget. She escorts organizational teams through change management, including process and workflow redesign. In addition to the support of the healthcare industry, Sally works as a facilitator conducting Project and Strategic Planning sessions for businesses and Non-Profit organizations.

With her Connect the Dots business, Sally offers advice (some available freely on her website) about structural analysis tools, process implementation, making wise decisions, moves, and mentoring. She believes in sharing knowledge and loves to network with friends from different stages of her life, and from professional associations oriented to nursing, critical care or women's leadership.

“Knowledge and wisdom are very powerful tools,” she says. “How important it is to freely share with the purpose of improving things!”

Sally has become such an expert at planting the seeds that nurture others’ growth that she just launched a second venture The Soul Garden Pathway. This web-based service will take some of the development and people-moving techniques she applied in consulting to a whole new level! It will also integrate some of her other loves, such as poetry (she wrote a book of poetry called Between Shifts) and inspirational messages. It will focus on the self-help methods to create the sanctuary of the soul.

Explore Sally’s career, wisdom and businesses in greater depth, during her two upcoming shows.

CUTV News will feature Sally Gallot Reeves of Connect the Dots Consulting and The Soul Garden Pathway in an interview with Jim Masters on May 1 at 1:00pm EST and Doug Llewelyn on May 8 at 1:00pm EST
