

Registration is limited with only 4 weeks to go for the 2nd Annual Pharmaceutical Microbiology West Coast Event

SMi Reports: There's less than 4 weeks left until the 2nd Annual Pharmaceutical Microbiology West Coast conference

SAN DIEGO , CALIFORNIA , USA, May 10, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- With less than four weeks to go until the 2nd Annual Pharmaceutical Microbiology West Coast conference, it's the last chance to register for the highly anticipated event. The conference will have a focus on providing updates and promoting discussion on the various key challenges and developments within the pharmaceutical microbiology industry.

Day one of the two-day event will explore topics and issues related to environmental monitoring, rapid methods and endotoxin testing, data integrity and aseptic processing. Day two will feature presentations on regulatory updates and microbial identification, bioburden testing and contamination control, and the applications of pharmaceutical microbiology and mycoplasma testing.

Featured presentations include:

- “Changing a paradigm: developing a roadmap to implementing a real time microbial detection analyzer in pharmaceutical water”
Presented by Mike Russ, Manager, QC Microbiology, Genentech
- “Aseptic processing in manufacturing”
Presented by William Fleming, Chief Consultant, GXP Consultants Inc
- “Fungal and bacterial spore excursions in cleanrooms — case studies”
Presented by Jim Polarine, Senior Technical Service Manager, STERIS Corporation
- “The background and implementation of mycoplasma testing”
Presented by Meghan May, Associate Professor of Biomedical Sciences, Microbiology and Infectious Disease, University of New England
- And many more...
