

Registration Opens for the 4th annual Airborne ISR 2018 conference

SMI Reports: Registration for SMI's 4th annual Airborne ISR conference has opened and the brochure is available to download

LONDON, LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, May 14, 2018

/EINPresswire.com/ -- After another successful year, SMI's 4th annual Airborne ISR conference is returning to London, UK on the 24th and 25th October 2018. The brochure has recently been released and registration is now open for the event, which will focus on delivering enhanced situational awareness through airborne solutions.

The two-day event is set to feature leading ISR platform programme managers, technical experts involved in BLOS data links, officers delivering new optronics and sensor suites as well as providing insight into the latest power and engine performance. In addition to two full days of presentations and panel discussions from expert speakers, the event will also feature a half-day pre-conference workshop on 23rd October 2018.

Event highlights include:

- Listening to keynote briefings from the host nation with senior officers from the Royal Air Force delivering key updates on Project Athena and ISR ambitions
- Hearing from senior officers from the Royal Australian Air Force, German Air Force, Hellenic Air Force, Swedish Air Force and Royal Netherlands Air Force providing updates on the latest ISR capability
- Learning how key industrial partners, including Leonardo, Rafael and Intelsat are developing this key ISR capability area and hearing about their latest solutions
- Gaining access to key military and government stakeholders over 4 hours of networking
- Discussing topics focused around key platforms from sensor suites, optronics, data telemetry and power, performance and cooling

Airborne ISR 2018 will feature presentations given by a number of high-ranking, military officials, as well as expert industry speakers, including:

- The chair for the event Air Marshall (Ret'd) Christopher Nickols, Former Chief of Defence

Intelligence, Royal Air Force

- Air Commodore Harvey Smyth, Lightning Force Commander, Royal Air Force
