When the Texas Mesothelioma Victims Center mentions electrical workers with mesothelioma they are referring to:

- * Electrical workers who worked at power plants/power house
- * Linemen
- * Maintenance workers for an electrical substation
- * Residential or commercial electricians
- * Oil/Gas electrical workers

The Texas Mesothelioma Victims Center says, "Some electrical workers in Texas can literally have similar levels of asbestos exposure to that of a US Navy Veteran or a shipyard worker. Unfortunately, you rarely hear about electrical workers with mesothelioma much like you're not very likely to know about construction workers with mesothelioma who built electrical substations in the 1960s, 1970s, and or 1980s.

"If you are an electrical worker, or any worker who was involved in the building of public utility facilities in Texas and you now have mesothelioma, please call us anytime at 800-714-0303 to ensure you really do hire one of the nation's most skilled mesothelioma attorneys who specializes in assisting electrical workers get the best possible financial compensation. Please don't hire a lawyer/law firm before first talking to us. The fulltime mesothelioma lawyers we suggest are based in Texas."

High-risk work groups for exposure to asbestos in Texas include Veterans of the US Navy, power plant workers, oil refinery workers, oil rig workers, chemical plant workers, factory workers, plumbers, electricians, auto mechanics, machinists, and construction workers. Typically, the exposure to asbestos occurred in the 1950's, 1960's, 1970's, or 1980's.

The states indicated with the highest incidence of mesothelioma include Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia, Michigan, Illinois, Minnesota, Louisiana, Washington, and Oregon. However, because Texas is one of the nation's largest energy producing states mesothelioma does happen to very good people in Texas.
