

Pandia Health Receives 2018 Future Planet Award

Pioneer birth control delivery service is recognized for outstanding global impact and change

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, June 4, 2018

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Sophia Yen MD.

MPH., founder, and CEO of Pandia Health, is one of six award recipients at the 2018 Future Planet Awards hosted by Future Planet Capital (FPC). FPC is partnered with Global University Venturing. Together, they aim to support a community of influencers and leaders who are on the verge of major global impact. The Future Planet Awards help raise the profile of new and growing firms that are implementing global changes in the spheres of education, security, health, climate change, and sustainable growth. Because Pandia Health was the winner of the UC Entrepreneur Pitch Competition at this year's Global Corporate Venturing and Innovation Summit, they received the 6th Future Planet Award in the special category.

Douglas Hansen-Luke, Executive Chairman at Future Planet Capital, said:

“Through Future Planet Capital's global network, we possess unrivaled access to some of the greatest innovation in technology and life science. We continue to seek the brightest minds that are profitably addressing some of the greatest challenges of our time. For the second year, The Future Planet Awards showcased how companies are committed to creating impact and disrupting the status quo. I would like to applaud all the category winners - including Pandia Health - for their significant achievements.”

As one of the six golden ticket winners, she was also invited to the GCVI Summit in London, England, where she was officially presented with the award. She also had the opportunity to give a presentation on how Pandia is transforming the way women receive and understand birth control to a room of fellow movers and shakers.

Pandia Health offers the easiest way to get birth control

- FREE delivery
- Online Prescription
- Automatic Refills

“It was an honor to be selected as the Future Planet winner in Monterey in January in the Special Category to represent the UCs,” says Yen. “The competition was stiff and while we didn't win, we are proud that we are bringing birth control to women wherever there is the Internet and a mailbox. There was interest from others about bringing our service to the UK."
