

Blood Plasma Injections for Hair Loss and Balding: Lilac Corp Recommends Nolopecia

Lilac Corp summarizes a paper on platelet rich plasma (PRP) treatment for hair loss, and recommends Nolopecia, a natural treatment for stimulating hair growth.

SARASOTA, FL, UNITED STATES, June 19, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- A new scientific article [1] discusses the platelet-rich plasma (PRP) treatment for hair loss. PRP is prepared by taking a patient's own blood and extracting its hair growth factors. Then, the extract is injected into the patient's scalp. This treatment has been shown to promote hair growth in several studies, especially when combined with other treatments.

The article mentions two recent studies that showed that PRP increased hair growth in 60 patients over a period of 12 months. Furthermore, in 13 other studies PRP was shown to be a promising biologic treatment for hair loss. Studies also showed that hair regrowth is increased when PRP is added to a 6-month treatment of finasteride or minoxidil.

There are many treatments for hair loss on the market. However only Nolopecia targets the latent viruses that cause the increase in 5alpha-R, DHT, and AR observed in people with hair loss and balding.”
