TraceGains Employees Take Home Huge Prizes in Annual Innovation Award Ceremony

WESTMINSTER, CO, UNITED STATES, June 19, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- TraceGains, the leading compliance software solution, revolutionizing information exchange across the supply chain for food, beverage, and CPG companies, announced three winners in the second annual TraceGains Innovation Awards at a company-wide meeting Wednesday, June 13.

Doug Plomer, Quality Assurance Specialist, took home the Platinum prize — a five-night, all-inclusive trip to Hawaii for two — for his idea that would help suppliers deliver food safety documentation to their customers in a quicker, safer, simpler way, easing their supply chain woes.

David Scott, Director, Sales Operations, earned the Gold prize — a three-night luxury trip to Aspen, CO — for his idea that would help customers zero in on how to better communicate with their suppliers and improve information exchange across the supply chain.

Michelle Maggio, Customer Success Manager, won the Silver prize — a high-end dinner and wine tasting for four at Colorado's Four Diamond Award-winning Flagstaff House — for her ideas that would better facilitate sharing food safety documents and accelerate desk audits.

"I am continually impressed with the remarkable creativity and innovation expressed by each member of the TraceGains team. The ideas this year were clever and will certainly move the needle for TraceGains as a company," shared Gary Nowacki, CEO, TraceGains. "I look forward to seeing what the team cooks up in this next year."

The number of ideas submitted for consideration in the TraceGains Innovation Award contest has doubled since its first year in 2017. More than fifty ideas were submitted, and although only three could win, all ideas will be considered for implementation to continually improve TraceGains. The three winners exemplify TraceGains' company culture of innovation, collaboration, and fun. Never one to rest on its laurels, TraceGains has already opened submissions for next year's contest and employees continue to brainstorm ways to improve the product suite and simplify the supply chain.
