Dayton, Ohio: MAFAZO LLC changes name to Ignyte Assurance Platform (Ignyte). MAFAZO rebranded to Ignyte Assurance Platform (IAP) as the company refocuses from being a services company to providing industries' first cyber assurance product platform.

“

Our new name emphasizes our commitment to our vision and reminds us to deliver on our promises through automation.”

Max Aulakh

“Our new name emphasizes our powerful expertise in cybersecurity engineering and our approach to building long-term service engagements as a trusted partner,” said Max Aulakh, President of Ignyte. “It articulates our commitment to our vision and reminds us to deliver on our promises through automation.”

The name change is effective immediately. The company chose “Ignyte Assurance Platform” after working closely with a Chief Marketing Officer and several key customers to develop its name. Ignyte is dedicated to providing its clients with an advanced cyber security assurance product and the name change reflects this transition.

“We had multiple, fantastic discussions with CEO of Ignyte as we tethered together ideas on how to help with existing Federal Regulations for researchers and clinicians that the ACMG supports,” said Dr. Bruce Bowdish. “Ignyte pushed the organizational changes needed to comply with fast-changing cybersecurity missions while likewise providing the underlying ‘engine’ needed to power efficient data management and reporting capabilities.”

Since the inception of the company, MAFAZO has been delivering high-end services engagements such as cyber systems integration, custom cyber product development, assessments and penetration testing for prestigious firms such as Department of Defense, Dell and many others.

The transition allows the company to regain its strength and focus on its highest and best use in providing an advanced cybersecurity software assurance product to its existing customers while gaining new customers.

This decision
