-- The O Zone Club, a Toronto swinger's club and adult lifestyle event venue, knows that in the world of swingers, mum's the word when it comes to the privacy of their clients. Due to lingering prejudices and judgements, there can sometime be negative side effects to swinger's "weekend habits" making their way into the light. A lot of people in the lifestyle prefer to keep their intimate habits to themselves – as they have every right to. For that reason, the O Zone Club takes well planned steps to ensure the privacy of everyone at the club.

When it comes to taking photos at the club – it's a hard no for guests. Photo taking is prohibited at the O Zone Club, however there is a professional photographer employed by the club who can take photos, though only with guest permission are any photos taken or images published.

"We have the utmost respect for our guests and make sure that their privacy is of paramount importance," says the club owner, "Discretion is an important part of the lifestyle. Our guests often like to keep their personal lives private, and don't want to have photos of them partaking in adult events plastered across social media for relatives or the like to see."

Though the swinger's lifestyle is heating up and becoming much more popular with today's crowd, there are still boundaries needed. Social media has become a large part of how businesses evaluate new employees and even keep tabs on current ones, so in the same manor that people wouldn't want their weekend activities to be brought into the workplace, so do many in the swinging lifestyle.
