market entry strategy. Each Market is different, the EU market where Pricing and Reimbursement is within the National competencies and is not regulated on EU level. The US having a two-step approval process: the first one is approval as a Biosimilar and the second step is approval as an interchangeable biosimilar with a one-year exclusivity for the first interchangeable biosimilar. Companies need to better understand the corresponding market and then set and execute tier development and regulatory strategy.

I'll address the 'US-FDA interchangeability guidance - what is needed to obtain the interchangeable status for the biosimilar product'. This is a very hot topic in view of the Draft US-FDA Guidance published in January 2017. The audience will hear about the latest FDA regulatory changes towards interchangeability of biosimilars.

- Evaluation of biosimilars in the race to obtaining this status
- First in line: recommendations on how to achieve interchangeability and succeed obtaining 12 months exclusivity as first interchangeable biosimilar.
- Discuss what will need to be done after accomplishing this to increase biosimilar uptake in patients, physicians and prescribers' groups and non-the less the success and profitability of the Biosimilar developing company.
