

A New Way to Travel

Make and Save Money While You Travel or Shop

TORONTO, CANADA, August 15, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- As companies continue to protect their brands and attempt to keep customers coming back, Sensors Quality Management Inc. (SQM), continues its growth in the United States.

As a result of a recent expansion, SQM expects to hire between 10,000 and 15,000 new inspectors, across the country, to complete the company's various assignments.

"Whether it's flying on various airlines, traveling by bus, staying in hotels, dining in restaurants or buying clothes, SQM's field force makes money and saves money in return for providing feedback on their experiences with various businesses", says David Lipton, President of SQM.

One of the company's most popular assignments involves Mystery Shopping the travel industry which provides the inspectors various opportunities to receive significant travel savings. The inspectors receive 50% off of air travel in return for evaluating the company's service, while a second type of assignment involves completing a short survey in return for up to $50.00 off of intercity/interstate bus travel. These inspections are popular with travelers on a budget who are looking for cheap flights or inexpensive trips.

“Consumers who are looking for a deal love the work, and we are thrilled to know we can help them save money while making the purchases that they want to,” says company spokesperson, Amy Chen.
