You would accidentally delete important files under different circumstances

A simple question to all, is it really possible that you can end up deleting any important file?

Yes, sometimes we can end up making such mistakes. The reasons can be any like:

- The system is full of unnecessary data and this prompted you to delete the files all of a sudden.
- The system was working quite slow and thus resulted in an immediate run of system cleaner.
- A USB device was connected and the anti-virus reflected some virus. You allowed the anti-virus program to delete the files.
- Another scenario can be when you have sent the files to the recycle bin and somehow they got deleted.
- You are working on some important files and unprecedentedly files get deleted, or corrupted.
- Sometimes system data get affected by virus attack making files vulnerable and lose important information.

Be it any of the reasons above, in case you have formatted the device without keeping a backup then you would be thinking on how to get back your important data in a safe way.
