Development of artificial pancreas will fuel the growth of insulin pump market.”

OMR Analyst

“The development of artificial pancreas will fuel the growth of global insulin market in the future. Artificial pancreas technology can be stated as the next step in the field of integrating insulin delivery systems and glucose monitors. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and JDRF (Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation) are working in collaboration with CGMS (Continuous Glucose Monitoring System Manufacturers) to develop artificial pancreas device system. FDA has laid down the guidelines for the use, design, safety as well as shelf life of this artificial system. Artificial pancreas is being developed with the aim to enhance the insulin delivery system as well as to help in attaining normal glucose levels. CGMS attached to the insulin delivery systems would automatically trigger insulin delivery. CGMS and insulin pumps are the primary components of artificial pancreas device system. Medtronic, Johnson & Johnson and Dexcom are some of the key players that are working on the development of artificial pancreas. Medtronic and Animas (J&J) have been successful in developing the first closed loop system.”

The market on the basis of geography is divided among four major regions – North America, APAC, Europe, and Rest of the world. North America is the major markets for insulin pump due to advancement in technology in insulin pumps. In addition, the region has large pool of diabetic patients owing to high obesity rate.
