The Clearwater Community Volunteers Center opens facility to newest nonprofit Scubonauts, a group that teaches kids diving skills for improving the environment

CLEARWATER, FLORIDA, USA, August 16, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- On Saturday August 18, the Clearwater Community Volunteers Center, supported by the Church of Scientology Flag Service Organization will host the regional meeting of Scubonauts International, a non-profit organization that teaches scuba diving and marine science to local youth to develop the community leaders of tomorrow. The regional meeting will bring several chapters of Scubonauts into the Clearwater Community Volunteers Center, and will have over 40 members in attendance.

The Tampa, Tarpon Springs, Sarasota, and Saint Petersburg Chapters will be at the regional meeting to coordinate on their diving activities throughout the year.

Scubonauts International was founded over 10 years ago, and its activities span all over Florida, around the Gulf of Mexico and in Hawaii. They specialize in using their diving skills for coral transplants to help maintain marine life ecosystems.

There are many things one can do to help take care of the planet. ... It is, after all, what we're standing on.”

L. Ron Hubbard

Michael Soltero, Manager for the Clearwater Community Volunteers center said, “Scubonauts teaches kids practical diving skills so that they can create an improved environment for people to live in. Scubonauts’ efforts to help people by giving them a better environment exemplifies what humanitarian L. Ron Hubbard once said, ‘There are many things one can do to help take care of the planet. ... It is, after all, what we're standing on.”

To support activities such as these, the Clearwater Community Volunteers Center provides the meeting space and refreshments to non-profit organizations, like Scubonauts, at no cost.
