

Mike Brandner Now Accepting Cases for Essure Implant Injuries

Mike Brandner Injury Attorneys are now accepting claims against Essure birth control implants and the serious side effects resulting from the device.

NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA , US, August 17, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In July, pharmaceutical giant Bayer announced their plan to discontinue the production and distribution of their birth control implant known as Essure. Essure is the only permanent form of non-surgical birth control available for women in the United States. However, this device has led many women to develop painful, and sometimes fatal, side effects.

Essure Birth Control Implant

The Essure implant itself is made up of polyester fibers surrounded by a flexible nickel alloy coil. The device is then implanted into the fallopian tubes in an non-surgical, out-patient procedure, where scar tissue will build around the implant over time. This scar tissue blocks the path released eggs take from the ovaries to reach the uterus, thus preventing pregnancy. This procedure is known as hysteroscopic sterilization.

The US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) originally approved Essure in 2002. However, reports of serious side effects stemming from use of the implant led to the FDA making some changes. In 2016, the FDA began to require a “black box” warning label on all packaging of Essure, and placed further restrictions on the distribution of the product two years later.

Bayer still firmly believes that their product is safe for public use. As a result, they will do all they can to ensure that you are not compensated for injuries you sustained from use of Essure. Personal injury lawyer Mike Brandner knows, “pharmaceutical giants like Bayer are notorious for being extremely resistant to admitting fault and compensating those their products have injured. We don't want to let them push you around. Our team wants to help you get the justice you
