

Linwood Jackson, Jr.'s book exposes key errors in early Christian development, encourages better course for believers

Linwood Jackson, Jr. contends that early Christian elders abandoned the simple doctrines of Christ to create a creed and service at odds with what Jesus taught.

BOSTON, MA, USA, August 22, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In his newest book, "A Fallen Record: The Christian Transgression," author Linwood Jackson, Jr. strongly contends that early Christian elders abandoned the simple doctrines of Christ and the original apostles to establish a creed and service that was at odds with what Jesus originally taught.

His hope is to reach back into the past to re-establish the original vision of the Christian faith for the future.

"There is no escaping the fact that, in whatever form it may appear, history will repeat itself," says Jackson. "But, I believe we can create a better future for ourselves by intelligently analyzing the past and making the present a catalyst for positive change."

With this latest book, he aims to make a difference in the way people think about their faith. "It is my hope to change the world's relativity," says Jackson, and to that end, he valiantly tackles the problems created by later church leaders head-on and works to redirect believers to the original faith that was "once and for all delivered to the saints." (Jude 3:3)

Many ideas in "A Fallen Record" are built upon themes developed in his previous book, "Perfecting & Reforming Personal Religion", (Fideli Publishing, Inc. 2017) which encourages readers to reconsider their personal mental and devotional diet, taking individual responsibility for their own spiritual growth and development.

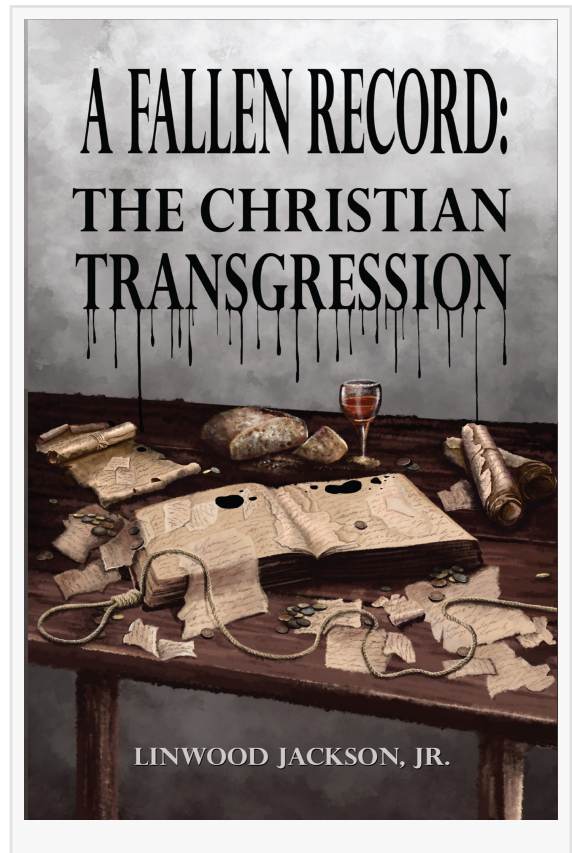

“

History will repeat itself. But, I believe we can create a better future for ourselves by intelligently analyzing the past and making the present a catalyst for positive change.”

Linwood Jackson, Jr.

"I love to write," says Jackson, "because it is an opportunity for someone to observe a perspective that they might never have known."

Both books by Jackson are published by Fideli Publishing, Inc., and are available on Amazon in both hardcover and Kindle editions.

About the Author

Linwood Jackson Jr. enjoys studying U.S. Constitutional Law and is devoutly in awe of the mind of the living God. All of his ambition for learning has come from the Bible, and whether the subject is math, or poetry, or history, or philosophy, he has learned that every bit of God's instruction is relevant to create a productive human being, soberly caring for both public and personal government. Follow him online and learn more at www.LinwoodJacksonJr.com.

###

Scott A. Shuford
FrontGate PR
9494291000
email us here

This press release can be viewed online at: <http://www.einpresswire.com>

Disclaimer: If you have any questions regarding information in this press release please contact the company listed in the press release. Please do not contact EIN Presswire. We will be unable to assist you with your inquiry. EIN Presswire disclaims any content contained in these releases. © 1995-2018 IPD Group, Inc. All Right Reserved.