

Leaders Join Forces to Protect the UK Service Sector from Cyber Threats

LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, September 4, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The service sector dominates over 80% of the UK's economy. But productivity levels are haunted by the sector's increasing exposure to cyber-attacks. Whether this is due to the complexity of businesses' supply chains or due to their growing IoT connectivity, one thing is certain: we must act immediately. Understanding the sector's cyber protection as a priority, Qatalyst Global presents the inaugural UKSec Summit in London, 28th- 29th of November 2018.

The banner features the UKSec logo (a stylized 'i' in a circle followed by 'KSEC') and the tagline 'Cyber Security for the Service Sector'. It includes the event dates '28th - 29th November 2018', the location 'Radisson Blu Edwardian, London, UK', and the website 'www.cyberseries.io/uksec'. A 'CPD CERTIFIED' logo is also present, indicating the event is recognized for continuing professional development. The background is dark blue with binary code and a glowing blue padlock icon.

Designed by and for senior security executives, UKSec unites IT experts from a wide range of the region's industries, such as: banking, finance, insurance, e-commerce, healthcare, wholesale & retail, media & telecoms, higher education, and branches of local & central governments.

Featuring 2 days of networking, panel presentations, and interactive discussions, the dynamic agenda includes topics such as: monitoring third party security risks, embedding a culture of cyber security, the skillsets a modern CISO should have, and how to minimise post-breach reputational damage.

Joining us onstage are:

- Nadeem Bukhari, Head of Information Security at House of Fraser
- Christian Toon, CISO at Pinsent Masons
- Deborah Haworth, CISO at Penguin Random House
- Steve Pritchard, Group CISO at HomeServe PLC
- Paul Watts, CISO at Domino's Pizza UK & Ireland Ltd
- Lewis Woodcock, Head of Information Security Compliance at A.P. Moller-Maersk

"We're really excited at the prospect of bringing the services sector together for the first time to tackle major security issues facing us. NotPetya and WannaCry really crystallised the need for a platform like UKsec, and we have big plans for its future next year and beyond." -Event director Kudsia Kaker.

A limited number of passes for the UKsec Summit are available at 20% off until October 31st. Use discount code UK20 at checkout online to redeem: www.cyberseries.io/uksec
