

ANCON Technologies receives inclusion in The Parliamentary Review

ANCON Technologies discusses in this year's review the challenges the world faces in various forms from global terrorism to medical pandemics

CANTERBURY, KENT, UNITED KINGDOM, September 10, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Parliamentary Review is an outstanding resource for organisations to share knowledge and best practice, not just across industry, but also across the political spectrum. It is widely respected across the political world, and it continues to influence government policy and strategy at the highest level.

ANCON Technologies discusses in this year's review the challenges the world faces in various forms from global terrorism to medical pandemics and how the development in detection equipment will be vital in our ability to respond to these issues.

The ANCON logo features the word 'ANCON' in a bold, blue, sans-serif font. A green leaf-like shape is integrated into the letter 'A'.

it has never been more important for government to hear the views of businesses and the public sector in a constructive forum”

Lord Eric Pickles

It has been a historic year for the aerospace, defence and security sectors, with the RAF celebrating their 100th anniversary alongside a plethora of other developments. This year's edition of The Parliamentary Review touches on these to raise industry standards and highlight particular areas of best practice for businesses large and small.

Lord Pickles the co-chairman of The Parliamentary Review, has noted that given the current political climate in British politics, "it has never been more important for government to hear the views of businesses and the public sector in a constructive forum" and there are "no other platforms that can achieve this as well as The Parliamentary Review."

Writing in The Review, the prime minister says that "British politics provides ample material for analysis in the pages of The Parliamentary Review."
