

Wisconsin Business Attorney & Coach Richard Kranitz publishes series of business coaching articles

Motivational and instructional articles were developed during Richard Kranitz' work as business coach for commercial businesses and their managers

GRAFTON, WISCONSIN, UNITED STATES, September 10, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Business attorney and coach Richard A. Kranitz, based in Wisconsin, has published a series of articles that he wrote during his work as business coach, when he coached entrepreneurs and managers how to better run their companies while enjoying the process.

Mr. Kranitz explains that "I have spent years learning and understanding the principles that underlie human behavior, particularly in the business world. Gradually, over time while coaching business managers to improve their performance, I condensed my experience and learning into a series of articles, which I am now making available on my Blog."

Attorney Richard Kranitz recently launched a blog that provides commentary and analysis of complex Business Law, Securities, and Taxation issues as a service to the public. In that Blog, he is sharing the experience that he has gained in over 45 years of solving complex Business Law problems not only for individuals but also for businesses.

Mr. Kranitz' Blog features legal analysis and commentary on significant court precedents, as well as regulatory developments.

Mr. Kranitz prides himself in being a counselor and mentor of business owners and managers, to encourage them to make positive and sustainable changes in their operations. He has served many years as an officer and director of firms in many industries, where he has assisted in business and strategic planning and problem solving to support growth with profits.

The series of coaching related articles include (key content in parentheses):

"Take the Key Step in Startup Success" (... Decades ago, most students of entrepreneurship believed that successful entrepreneurs had some rare ability that enabled them to build a rapid growth business - the ability to spot an opportunity that others missed - but in recent years, many who studied successful entrepreneurs have come to the same conclusion that I did from studying my more successful entrepreneur clients. They found an element that I found validated in my own experience in those companies that enjoyed sudden rapid growth. In most of those cases, the entrepreneur or startup team did one unique thing before they prepared their business plan. They performed a thorough feasibility analysis before they committed major funds. ...). See <https://richardkranitzblog.blogspot.com/2018/09/richard-kranitz-take-key-step-in.html>

“How to Develop and Attitude of Abundance” (... But just as people often start from either an optimistic or pessimistic perspective, people can begin with an attitude toward scarcity or abundance. Which attitude a business owner takes along that dimension can significantly affect the likely success or failure of his business. ...). is a key task in the process. Fortunately, there are some tools that can aid in accomplishing that task. One such tool is called a DISC assessment. Through having a job candidate or current employee fill out a detailed questionnaire it can generate a report that identifies certain key behavioral traits. This information can be used to select key personnel, assemble them into effective teams, and assist them to work together more effectively.).
