Higher shelf life and good load performance is driving the growth of nickel cadmium market" OMR Analyst "Higher shelf life and good load performance are crucial determinants while choosing batteries. NiCd batteries are more temperature tolerant, as they are operational both in hotter and colder climates than the other rechargeable batteries. NiCd batteries also have a longer shelf life and cycle life than the newer technologies which makes them a more preferable option compared to other batteries. The shelf life for nicad batteries is 36 months, according to Panasonic. NiCd batteries that last 18 months, normally require many charge/discharge cycles to get it to perform at 80% capacity. NiCd cell offers the best cost/performance value of any rechargeable battery. It is a mature technology that is being produced in large volumes by many different manufacturers. The high shelf life of the battery increases the demand for such batteries and hence propels the growth of the market."
