Growing alliance among vendors and institutions enhance the growth of artificial intelligence (AI) in education market”

OMR Analyst

“The market for artificial intelligence in education is driven by extensive alliance and collaborations among market players. The players are collaborating on the development of new technologies. In addition, these players are focused on enhancing their existing partnerships with other firms. For instance: Curtin University in August 2018, entered into a collaboration with Optus Business to address impact of artificial intelligence on higher education, regional telecommunication and urban environment. The partnership is focused on improving student outcomes as well as funding for PhD scholarships and student projects. Such alliance in the market will significantly enhance the market growth as with such alliances, institutions are adopting artificial intelligence to enhance students experience and to serve better education.”

The global artificial intelligence in education market on the basis of geography is divided into –

North America, APAC, Europe, and Rest of the world. North America is expected to have the largest share in artificial intelligence in education market owing to increased adoption of cloud-based services and increasing trend of smart learning. Moreover, APAC will have considerable share in the forecast period due to presence of dominating players such as Japan and China.
