Scope of the Report:

This report focuses on the 4K TV in global market, especially in North America, Europe and Asia-Pacific, South America, Middle East and Africa. This report categorizes the market based on manufacturers, regions, type and application.

- The evolving nature of the consumer electronic industry, advancements in graphic engines of televisions, increased pressure on manufacturers to reduce prices, and popularity of the ultra-high definition technology and its advantages have fueled the demand for UHD televisions in the past few years. Latest graphic processors permit advanced technical image formats and have improved the content quality significantly hence, they are widely used in production and distribution of UHD content. Customers are getting accustomed to using such contents, which is further anticipated to spur the market growth.

- Major television broadcasters and content producers are making huge investments in the UHD technology. They are aiming to offer better UHD content to a wide range of customers. Moreover, professional filmmakers are shifting toward UHD resolutions by using ultra-high definition camcorders and cameras. These trends are also expected to fuel the growth of the market.

- Further, owing to the crystal clear and sharp viewing experience, ultra-high definition televisions are projected to be adopted in numerous applications beyond the home entertainment industry. A few of the potential applications are telepresence and telemedicine and military intelligence gathering and monitoring.

- The worldwide market for 4K TV is expected to grow at a CAGR of roughly xx% over the next five years, will reach xx million US$ in 2023, from xx million US$ in 2017, according to a new GIR (Global Info Research) study.
