

Leading Industry Experts to present exclusive technical briefings at Air Missile Defence Technology 2018

SMi reports: ThalesRaytheon Systems, Moog and IAI Elta Systems amongst many others, to present at the conference in October

LONDON, WATERLOO, UNITED KINGDOM, September 28, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The need for all-encompassing air defence programmes has become a common goal for allied forces around the world. Bringing together senior representatives from military, industry and academia, SMi's Air Missile Defence Technology (AMD) 2018 conference in 4 weeks time will centre on developing and improving the technology behind AMD programmes to ensure they are well prepared for future mission requirements.

This year's two-day meeting taking place in Prague on the 23rd and 24th October 2018 will provide delegates with exclusive technical briefings from industry experts, as well as a dedicated exhibition space to showcase the latest technologies.

Featured technical briefings include 'How NATO Air Command and Control System [NATO ACCS] is continuously adapting to its environment' presented by: Mr Wade Thompson, Senior Marketing Manager, ThalesRaytheonSystems; 'Similarities and Differences in Air Surveillance and GBAD radars' presented by: Mr Israel Oznovich, Air Surveillance and Defence, Elta Systems; and 'Moog Innovative Flexible Missile Platform' presented by: Mr Richard Allen-Miles, Head of Sales, Moog Defence Europe.

For those wishing to register, view the very latest agenda or download the brochure visit www.airmissiledefence.com/ein . Past attendee lists and sponsor interviews are also available to download on the website.

The conference is proudly sponsored by IAI Elta Systems, Moog, PBS Velka Bites, Tetraedr and ThalesRaytheon Systems.
