A Handy Automation Tool Closes Programs at the Scheduled Time

AutoClose is a new freeware utility that enables users to close running programs at the scheduled time automatically.

L.A., CALIFORNIA, US, October 11, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- AutoClose.net today releases the new handy freeware tool AutoClose, which allows users to specify how and when to close running programs on the Windows system if they need to be away from the computer. The file size of this tiny tool is only 1.3 MB (portable version is 1.0 MB), so users could easily download, store or share the program. With AutoClose users can also decide to shut down, log off, hibernate, reboot the computer or turn off the monitor after closing all specific programs. It can support multiple tasks at a time and enable to end background tasks effectively.

Sometimes people may put a file on rendering or when they are downloading a large file, or even when the system and applications are upgrading; there is no way to avoid leaving the computer on for hours. At times like these, the AutoClose application that automatically ends all activities and switches off the PC once completed all tasks would be very helpful.

AutoClose is not only designed to close programs and turn off the computer automatically, but it also gives users plenty of other options as well. Users can also indicate if they want to put the system to sleep or hibernate after a certain period. This function can allow users to resume working from where
