“Veloz offers an important forum to bring together stakeholders and decision makers in California’s electric vehicle industry,” said Josh Cohen, director of public policy at SemaConnect. “This kind of partnership between government, automakers, EV infrastructure, and utility providers is exactly what’s needed to electrify transportation at scale. We look forward to working with other Veloz members to find solutions that will help California reach its zero emissions goals.”

“Veloz is a monumental collaboration between a wide range of EV stakeholders,” said Mahi Reddy, CEO of SemaConnect. “We joined because we wanted to get involved in important conversations with the wider industry, and because large-scale campaigns such as ‘Electric for All’ are essential for educating drivers.
