

Join Rheinmetall, Raytheon and the US Army as they come together in 4 weeks at Future Armoured Vehicles Survivability

Smi reports: Raytheon, Rheinmetall and US Army come together, just as Raytheon and Rheinmetall pair up for the US Army next-gen combat vehicle competition

LONDON, WATERLOO, UNITED KINGDOM, October 17, 2018

/EINPresswire.com/ -- In recent news, "Raytheon Company and Rheinmetall Defence have joined forces to meet the U.S. Army's requirement for the Next-Generation Combat Vehicle-Optionally Manned Fighting Vehicle program. The team will offer the new Lynx Infantry Fighting Vehicle paired with Raytheon weapons, sensors and system integration expertise provide the Army with an advanced, modular, survivable and lethal solution with unmatched growth potential." Raytheon technology could include advanced variants of Raytheon weapons such as the Active Protection System, amongst many other things [Source: Raytheon].
