Testing Phase Begins For KYC (Know Your Customer) And AML (Anti-Money Laundering) Connectivity by Verifundr (OTC Pink: APTY)

EDMONTON, ALBERTA, CANADA, October 25, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- APT Systems, Inc. (OTC Pink: APTY), a fully-reporting, publicly-traded, fintech company, announced today it has begun testing its new KYC (Know Your Customer) and AML (Anti-Money Laundering) system and reports, to ensure its compliance with regulators. The Company's application approval and support received from key third party data providers was critical to our business plan.

Cutting edge solutions like the 'instant identity feature' are delivered electronically and incorporate data designed to mitigate potential risks around and for members and vendors.

Verifundr instant electronic identity covers four key areas and is backed with intelligent due diligence processing:

- Member Acceptance Policies
- Member Accreditation Procedure
- Monitoring of Transactions
- Risk Management and Reporting

Advanced analytic solutions significantly improve screening processes that are the mainstay of our trusted financial ecosystem which management is committed to create and sustain. We can use software to help accredit members by using parameters that include sources of funds and business interests.

KYC and AML also serve as a check and balance for the private exchange that accepts fiat currency, converts US dollars to Spera digital dollars, which can be stored or used for escrow, payments, and related activities.

Spera is a stable coin which is essential for certain things to function properly, like cryptographically guaranteeing contracts on the Blockchain. Stable coins also ease the path toward real-world commerce. We can all agree that it is currently difficult to buy a pizza with a coin that could drop 30% in value the next day. While we are not reinventing banking, it is hoped that our solutions prove helpful to members and allow them the flexibility to move easily around an ever merging fiat and cryptocurrency world.
