Today the VMs remain, working with other volunteers from officials to members of various faiths to do something about what has happened to that community.

On November 14th, April Miller, the Administrative Assistant for the City of Panama City's Parks and Recreation Department, wrote to VM headquarters, "The City of Panama City would like to thank the Scientology Volunteers for your hard work and dedication during a very difficult time." Glendy Goodsell, the Executive Director of the Scientology Volunteer Ministers of Florida and coordinator for the disaster relief efforts said that the VMs are working with many people to not only clean up debris but most importantly provide food, water, and hygiene supplies.
