You are eligible to receive workers' compensation benefits if you sustain a workplace injury or an occupational illness preventing you from returning to a job according to New Jersey Workers' Compensation Law. Benefits from a workplace accident can be permanent disability benefits, temporary disability benefits, or death benefits.

You are eligible to receive workers' compensation benefits if you sustain a workplace injury or an occupational illness preventing you from returning to a job.”

Craig Altman, Esq.

Each Workers' Compensation Claim is different and needs to be handled carefully by an experienced workers' compensation attorney. If not, you may lose wages, compensation for medical bills, and other damages that as an injured worker you deserve.

WHO YOU ARE

You're from Vineland, New Jersey. Since 1952 workers like you have been the tough, hardworking and independent backbone of the town's workforce. From "The Avenue" to the Boulevard, you represent your town with the same work ethic that Vineland-native Mike Trout brings to every at-bat. But just like Trout can hit the Disabled List, Vineland workers can also get injured on the job. If you do get hurt at work, you're going to need to review your options carefully and consider workers' compensation benefits.

You are the heart and soul of Vineland, New Jersey. You are its workforce.

You may be a teacher, working at D'Ippolito Elementary School and suffer from carpal tunnel syndrome or neck/back injuries from repetitive grading too many papers long into the night.

You could be a part of the Vineland Historical and Antiquarian Society devoting your life to protecting the cultural identity of Vineland's past. But who protects you when you are injured at work? Under certain circumstances the "benefits" promised to workers may get denied or not correctly cover accidents at work. This is where trained workers' compensation attorneys who are familiar with New Jersey's Worker's Compensation Laws step in to assist.

You may be a DJ working at one of Vineland's locally-licensed radio stations such as WVLT (92.1) or WMIZ (1270). Injuries happen everywhere, even in showbiz! The most common injuries for media and communications industry workers include:

Strains and sprains from repetitive trauma

Slip, trip and fall accidents
Being struck by a falling object
Carpal tunnel or back injuries from repetitive motion
Being caught in or injured by a machine at the office
Accidents involving tools

A work-related injury can happen at any time. You were doing your job, handling your business and bringing home the bacon. But then you got hurt at work, and now your family's financial future is in the hands of strangers. Choose your workers' compensation attorney wisely. Don't play games with your benefits or wait to file your claim. The insurance company does not have your interests at heart and is not on your side, but a skilled workers' comp lawyer does.
