Owner and CEO of Exceptional Villas said that “many of our clients are now looking for more than just a beach holiday. They want something a bit more experiential and exotic. Mustique and The Grenadines ticks all the boxes”. In addition, the company is finding that many of their particularly discerning clients are happy to take the extra short flight required to get to a new destination they would like to experience for the first time. There are regular flights from both Barbados and St Lucia to Mustique and The Grenadines. The flights generally connect with the international flights making the extra travel very easy and seamless.

Of course, the tourism industry is not new to Mustique and The Grenadines. It is a very important economic driver that creates thousand of much need jobs for the region. Mustique has always been one of the world’s most fashionable and exclusive islands. Mustique first came onto the radar as a holiday destination during the sixties when Lord Glenconner gave Princess Margaret a ten-acre plot of land as her wedding gift. She subsequently went onto build one of the world’s most iconic villas called Les Jolie Eaux. Mustique Island received a further boost to its popularity when Concorde flew to Barbados. Click Here

Soon after that time, clients who wished to experience an added level of exclusivity and security and privacy took the short hop over to Mustique. This is also when many of the world’s most successful entrepreneurs and most famous people-built villas on the island. Some of the more famous names that own or have owned properties on the island include Mick Jagger, Bryan Adams, Tommy Hilfiger, Ralph Lauren, and David Bowie. In more recent times, many household names still like to enjoy holidays on the islands. Kate Middleton and Prince William are regularly seen enjoying holidays in Mustique for example. It is one of the few places in the world where very famous people can come and enjoy a holiday without being disturbed. This is where they can truly relax.

The real essence of Mustique and The Grenadines is that of true barefoot luxury, combined with an incredibly friendly open house party atmosphere. These islands are the type of places where you can meet lifelong friends with similar outlooks in life where fellow guests.
