Keith Ricketts, Vice President of Marketing at Sword Active Risk said; “Our new office in Kuala Lumpur supports our expansion plans to help meet the growing demand for risk management software, building on our current presence in Asia. This focus on Malaysia is as a result of the demand in the area for our risk management solution from many different industries – including railway, engineering and utilities organizations. They have large, complex infrastructure projects which carry high risk in operational costs and resource management to deliver and complete in rigid timescales. ARM is proven risk management software that has been deployed by clients in many high profile projects and we have worked with partners to deliver on the critical milestones.”

Sword Active Risk has recently completed the last of its Global Conference events, held in Sydney, for ARM customers, risk practitioners and risk consultants. The company launched a Partner Program for Risk Consultants in July 2017 as part of its engagement with the risk community, which will also be a focus for the new Malaysian office. Partners like SNS Eng in Asia are already providing specialist enterprise risk management and systems engineering consulting services for customers in the defense, engineering and construction industries in the region, supported by Active Risk Manager.
