

Steven R. Pietro shares details of company's charitable donations at Christmas time Businessman and law graduate Steven R. Pietro opens up about military food supplies business and its charitable donations made during the festive season.

WEST PALM BEACH, FLORIDA, USA, December 14, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- A Native American service-disabled veteran owned business established and run by law graduate and businessman Steven R. Pietro, Justice Government Supply, Inc. proudly serves the women and men of the U.S. armed forces with a complete catalog of the finest steaks, roasts, select butcher chops and more across the globe.

"It's about giving our troops a true taste of home," says Pietro. "We would never serve anything to our troops that our families and we would not eat ourselves," he explains. "To that end, our motto is indeed that we provide 'a true taste of home,'" adds the business owner.

The company's charitable efforts at Christmas time began when Pietro and his team donated 5,000 lbs of prime T-bone steaks to troops stationed in war-torn Afghanistan.

The law graduate and businessman has continued the tradition each year since making subsequent charitable donations during Christmas and at various other times of the year to troops and other military personnel stationed around the world.

Today, Justice Government Supply, Inc. regularly ships upwards of 250,000 lbs of product at a time, something which Pietro says is both challenging and exciting in equal measure. "We've grown from selling individual pork chops, hamburgers, and steaks to fulfilling volumes of product which now involve incredible economies of scale and huge logistical undertakings," he explains.

"During the war in Afghanistan," he continues, "we became the number one bulk ground beef provider worldwide, consistently delivering a superior quality product, source-loaded directly from our plant in Chicago and shipped straight through to Kabul, thereby saving the U.S. Government a substantial sum of money on each order."

Steven R. Pietro is rightly proud of his achievements and accomplishments with Justice Government Supply, Inc. having now served American troops across the globe for over a decade. "I'm immensely fortunate to have a business partner who is truly as committed as I am in terms of honesty, integrity, honor, and in providing the absolute best quality products at highly competitive price points," he explains.

Pietro's partner at Justice Government Supply, Inc. is Grady Renville, a service-disabled veteran and Native American of a recognized tribe who served in three of the four branches of the U.S. military.

With the company's most recent round of festive donations now made, Steven R. Pietro is keen to reflect on the overriding philosophy of operations at Justice Government Supply, Inc., both at Christmas time and year round. "There are no problems, only solutions," he declares, wrapping up, "and failure is simply never an option."
