

HOA Management (.com) Announces New Website

The redesigned website offers visitors an easy way to connect with service providers and management companies that serve the community association industry.

CHEYENNE, WYOMING, UNITED

STATES, December 19, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- HOA Management (.com) Inc. which developed the first online marketplace to match community associations with service providers, announced today the launch of its revamped website. The new site offers users quick and easy access to local management companies, service providers, and industry information. The new design carries with it the same unparalleled exposure on major search engines as the previous site. With its new look and functionality HOA Management (.com) has made it even easier for local board members to find local management and service providers quickly on their PC, tablet, or cell phone.

This new site will allow our visitors to have a very informative experience and find exactly what they are looking for quickly and easily.”

Jason Lewis

The website has a clean uncluttered design, improved search functionality, and enhanced rich content focused on helping HOA volunteers and leaders. Jason Lewis, Director of Sales and Marketing, states, "It is our mission at HOA Management (.com) to provide an easy to use, one stop destination for HOA board members and volunteers to access more information and companies that can empower them to help their communities." The website also features a directory that helps board members find quality HOA property management companies and service providers in their area. The website can be found at <http://www.HOAManagement.com>.

"We are excited about our new website launch and the robust information it provides for condo, townhome, and single-family community associations across the country. We believe that this new site will allow our visitors to have a very informative experience and find exactly what they are looking for quickly and easily." – Jason Lewis, Director of Sales and Marketing for HOA Management (.com).

HOA Management (.com)'s new website will be updated on a regular basis with industry news, business activity, and helpful information about issues community managers and board members face on a regular basis. "Association management companies and HOA vendors are encouraged to explore the website and contact us to learn more about how we can help get them connected with more associations in their area," says Lewis.

In addition to management companies, the website has a Vendor Services area that allows HOA board members to find qualified vendors that can help their association. Jason Lewis says, "Companies like landscapers, pool companies, attorneys, HOA tax and accounting firms, software companies, roofing companies, painters, and engineering firms are encouraged to contact us. Homeowners associations rely on these services and board members are always needing assistance."

About HOA Management (.com): As the first online directory serving the HOA management industry, HOA Management (.com) has connected thousands of associations with management companies and vendors in their local area and has provided helpful tools and literature for board members and managers alike. In an industry where over $40 billion per year is spent on maintaining and repairing properties nationwide, HOA Management (.com) is the number one destination for board members and managers when looking for local firms that are qualified to service community associations.
