"As a motivational speaker, I get asked all of the time how I have found passion in my life, explained Micah Raskin. "I encourage everyone to ask themselves what they love to do, and chase that down."

Micah Raskin encourages people to think if they could be doing anything in the world, what would it be and why? Understanding the emotional hurdles that come with changing your life can be a daunting task, but not asking the questions means you will stay where you are, and that's not a great place to be.

If the work you are doing now does not fulfill you, or you struggle through it and do not enjoy the challenge it provides, then chances are you are not living up to your full potential.

"I get asked often about why I love what I do," explained Micah Raskin. "I challenge people to ask themselves why are you here, and what do you want to leave behind."

If you can focus on answering why you are here, you can figure out how to find your true calling. Start by writing down a mission statement for your life. Get connected with who you are on a core level, and start writing down what you want to leave behind. Thinking about your legacy and your mission statement for your life have a way of grounding you and helping you channel the energy and frustration you have inside.

Micah Raskin also encourages people to really think about where they want to go next. Part of building a life for yourself that involves your true passion is laying out a path with goals in front of you that challenge you to keep going.

It's never easy finding your passion, but when you do, you see the world in a different light and it makes every challenge you face on a daily basis worth overcoming.
