Acceptable behaviors in your dealership are not defined by your anti-harassment policy, they are defined by the behaviors you choose to tolerate”

Dave Druzynski, Chief People Officer

"Nowadays, harassment allegations are hitting mainstream media and social media outlets so fast, you could have people staging online boycotts of your business before you even hear about the alleged harassment," said Druzynski. "A nightmare like this can be catastrophic to your dealership's reputation and bottom line."

If your dealership's anti-harassment strategy involves handing out an outdated policy buried in an employee handbook, or showing corny 1980's VHS training tapes, your dealership and your employees are vulnerable.

"Acceptable behaviors in your dealership are not defined by your anti-harassment policy, they are defined by the behaviors you choose to tolerate," said Druzynski. "When people hear harassment, most think of sexual harassment, but harassment comes in all forms. For example, unwelcome or offensive conduct that is based on an individual's race, religion or disability, or even some of those 'harmless' pranks that you play on the new hire, can constitute illegal harassment."

In his workshop, Druzynski will review the legal definition of harassment and cover the differences in federal versus state harassment statutes. He will also share modern-day best practices for harassment prevention.

Workshop attendees will learn how to:

- Define and build a culture of inclusion and tolerance
- Eliminate fear of retaliation for employees who want to report problems
- Respond quickly and appropriately to all reported incidents
- Attract and retain more female employees into the workplace

Prevent Workplace Harassment is scheduled for the following days and times:

Thursday, January 24 from 1:00pm - 2:00pm in Room 3003W
Saturday, January 26 from 10:30am - 11:30 am in Room 3002W

In his role as CPO at Auto/Mate, Druzynski oversees strategic HR planning, talent management, employee engagement, leadership development, compensation, and legal and regulatory compliance. He has earned the prestigious distinction as a Senior Professional in Human Resources (SPHR) and has been certified by the Society of Human Resource Management as a Senior Certified Professional (SHRM-SCP).
