

WOLFCOM® Announces Leadership Change

PASADENA, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, January 2, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- WOLFCOM®, the police body worn camera manufacturer, today announced key changes to its leadership effective immediately. After a three-year hiatus to solely focus on the development of WOLFCOM's technology products, company founder and President, Peter Austin Onruang will resume the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) position, while Tiffany Wang will take up the position of Chief Operating Officer (COO).

According to Onruang, the change in management positions will not impact any of the company's operations.

"Tiffany Wang did a superb job as acting CEO that allowed me to focus on research and development for the past three years. Now that many of our new solutions have launched, I feel its time for me to resume my position at the helm. It will be business as usual and we will continue to serve our customers," Onruang said.

WOLFCOM® has been at the forefront of introducing industry-first features and cutting-edge technologies in the body worn camera industry. WOLFCOM's body worn cameras, accessories and evidence management solutions are being used by law enforcement agencies in 26 countries.
