

The Leadership Trend Everyone is Talking About

DURHAM, NC, US, January 22, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- If there's one thing you can count on in health care, it's that change and uncertainty are here today—and will continue tomorrow. It's also true that an organization's leadership style is the critical factor that determines how it meets and exceeds expectations in the face of such change and uncertainty.

Far too many healthcare organizations lack effective leadership and fail to focus on developing leadership skills in managers and supervisors. Organizations that lack strong leaders—and have no time to focus on leadership development—are left with a “leadership gap.”

In her new industry report, Can One Leadership Style Change the Way you Train and Retain Caregivers? In the Know's Linda Leekley tackles change, uncertainty, and the growing leadership gap in healthcare.

Linda believes, “Organizations who adopt a transformational leadership style are better positioned to adapt to these changes, innovate new solutions, and remain positive and profitable in spite of growing uncertainty.”

In her new report, Linda outlines the necessity and the motive for healthcare leaders to begin to focus on their leadership style in order to remain competitive in a changing market.
