One guest, Sophie Krekich, best summed up the group’s resolve saying, “I still can’t come to grips with how something this horrible could take place. We all need to learn from the past, so that horrific human rights violations such as this never happen again!”

Following the event guests received their own copies of the booklet, “What are Human Rights” explaining the 30 human rights enshrined in the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The booklet is produced by Youth for Human Rights International,

Youth for Human Rights:

The Church of Scientology sponsors Human Rights education all over the world through its support of the non-profit organizations United for Human Rights and Youth for Human rights. By informing people of their rights set forth in the Universal Declaration of Human rights ratified by the United Nations in 1948, people are empowered with knowledge and are inspired to help defend and stand up for their rights and prevent violations of them for others. The Church supports these initiatives based on the writing of L. Ron Hubbard where he says, "Human Rights must be made a fact, not an idealistic dream."
