Computer software can perfectly match a client's requirements when it comes to physical facilities such as the number of bedrooms and whether a property is located on the beach or not or has a swimming pool. But finding the perfect vacation rental is much more than that. It is about working out what the client's dream vacation looks like and what is important to them. And what type of atmosphere, ambience and vibe they want. It is much more subjective and individual to each client and takes more than a computer programme to work out.

The Exceptional Villa team are highly trained and spend a lot of time with their clients working out all of these things before they propose a short list of villas and vacation rentals for their clients. Part of the training is to view and inspect every single property they represent regularly. They also guarantee that you will be speaking to a team member who has actually been to see the properties and knows them exceptionally well.

Alexandra Baradi, Owner and CEO of Exceptional Villas who are also considered to be one of the most trusted villa rental companies in the world, said: “Our high-end discerning clients are absolutely delighted with our villa matching service." The word is spreading about this service, and we are finding a significant surge in bookings as a result. Finding the right property today can be a difficult task with all the various distribution sites available. This service takes all the pain out of searching for the perfect property for your next vacation.
