“Companies such as Identity Maestro are the lifeblood of the technology industry, which employs an estimated 50 million people worldwide and contributes $5 trillion annually to the global economy,” said Nancy Hammervik, executive vice president for industry relations at CompTIA. “With its commitment to bringing innovation to customers, career opportunities for its staff and economic and social benefits to its community, Identity Maestro is a strong addition to our growing membership ranks.”

“Identity Maestro has long been a proponent of Identity Management as a Service best practices for IT Help Desk teams, so it makes perfect sense that we would join an association that guides the standards for our industry,” says Davin Cooke, US Director of Business Development. “We are proud to have become CompTIA members and look forward to adding our voice to the IT discussions.”

Identity Maestro brings over 16 years of experience helping Government, Education and Enterprise clients meet Identity Management best practices through secure delegated task authority over directory systems, CRMs and legacy line-of-business applications. Recently, Identity Maestro launched its Microsoft Azure based system for MSPs and Service Desk teams.

CompTIA members have access to tools and resources to help them stay on the leading edge of the tech industry, including education and training on the latest innovations; comprehensive research on the industry trends, best business practices tools and other valuable business management resources. The association also provides opportunities for member interaction and networking, where companies come together with their peers to address business challenges and other issues impacting the industry. Finally, CompTIA is the leading provider of vendor-neutral skills certifications for technology professionals around the world.
