/EINPresswire.com/ -- Executive Education Academy Charter School in Allentown has expanded its incubator career program, offering high school seniors the opportunity to interact with business professionals and mentors in a variety of career fields.

Executive Education Charter School in Allentown has expanded its career training program

The school has welcomed local professionals and business leaders into its building, providing them with office space in exchange for hours of service to students through mentorship programs, speaking engagements, and support.

We strive to show our students all of the opportunities that are available to them”

Stephen Flavell, COO & Founder

“We are thrilled to have such a variety of leading professionals on hand to assist our students as they explore career and college opportunities,” says Stephen Flavell, founder and chief operations officer of the Lehigh Valley charter school.

Students participating in the incubator career program are divided into 16 distinct career clusters based on their interests and aspirations. These clusters include technology and communications; agriculture, food, and natural resources; architecture and construction; business management; finance; marketing; government and public administration; education; information technology; health sciences; manufacturing; law and public safety; hospitality and tourism; human services; transportation and logistics; and science, engineering, and mathematics.

“We strive to show our students all of the opportunities that are available to them,” adds Flavell.
