

Custom wedding invitations set the tone

Good print shops can take a customer's idea and turn it into exactly what the client wants. The best print shops can take a client's idea and improve it.

LOS ANGELES, CA, US, February 25, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Couples planning to get married should look at custom wedding invitations to send out. Seda Kangani said the kind of invitations used really sets the tone for the whole wedding.

"We can do just about any kind of invitation you want. We provide the best custom wedding invitations in LA," Ms. Kangani said. "All we really need from you is who is getting married, when, where, what time and how many invitations you need."

Good print shops can take a customer's idea and turn it into exactly what the client wants. The best print shops can take a client's idea and improve it.

"If you have an idea of what you want, great. If not, we just need a few details of how you wedding will happen and we'll show you our ideas," Ms. Kangani said.

Some people like elegant invitations with formal script, embossing and foil. Others want simple print just saying who, what, where and when. She said that's a decision the customer really has to make.

"We just want you, as the couple getting married, to be happy with the invitations," she said. "We can customize as much or as little as you like. We can even match the invitations to the theme of your wedding."

The point of wedding invitations is twofold. First, to let people know they are invited to a wedding and what to expect. Second, to give those people something to remember the wedding. Ms. Kangani said many people keep a wedding invitation forever.

"Even the couple getting married keep some of the invitations. They can be handed down to children and grandchildren. It serves as a tangible reminder of that special day," she said. "Many years after the wedding and the couple have passed away, these invitations will be treasured heirlooms. That's why you need to put some thought into them."

Ink, paper, envelopes and even reply cards are all part of a complete wedding invitation set. Seda's Printing has examples of all these, including samples from previous wedding invitations the shop has printed.
