Djibouti seals landing station deal for the DARE cable system

Djibouti is one of the few remaining countries in which the national telco, Djibouti Telecom (DT), has a monopoly on all telecom services, including fixed lines, mobile, internet and broadband. The lack of competition has meant that the market has not lived up to its potential. While domestic infrastructure remains poor the country is one of the best connected for international fibre cables in the region. The Djibouti Internet Exchange is a meeting point for a number of cable systems passing between the Red Sea and Indian Ocean.

Despite this connectivity, broadband services in Djibouti remain very expensive, which continues to hold back the full growth potential of the sector. As a result penetration in all market segments is low.

Although growth in the mobile and internet markets is accelerating in line with DT's investment in its mobile network, competition and foreign investment are both required for the telecoms market to show solid development in coming years. In preparation for this, DT itself is forging international alliances, and has been a key investor in cables including the DARE, PEACE and AWE systems.

Key developments:

Work starts on the PEACE submarine cable linking Djibouti with Pakistan;
Djibouti Telecom joins six regional telcos to build the DARE submarine cable system, is contracted to manage the Australia West Cable landing;
Djibouti Internet Exchange (DjIX) joins the African IXP Association;
Djibouti Telecom signs an agreement to peer IP traffic through France-IX's IXPs in Paris and Marseille;
Growth in the mobile and internet sectors accelerates with 3G launch;
Gulf Bridge International (GBI) signs MoU to land an extension of its cable to Djibouti;
Report update includes the regulators market data, ITU data for 2017, recent market developments.
