Savage Enterprises Positions Itself as leader of hemp

IRVINE, CA, USA, March 26, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Savage Enterprises' backing of Hemp products coincides with the anticipated signing of the 2018 Farm Bill which contains provisions for legalizing industrial hemp. Removal of industrial hemp as a designated controlled substance would legalize the crop under federal law if grown by a licensed grower in compliance with state and federal regulations. With wide bipartisan support, President Trump is expected to sign the historic new Farm Bill into law before year-end. See <https://brook.gs/2EtMykI>

Having originally entered the vaping marketplace to help people stop smoking, Savage quickly recognized the value of after it has been shown in small studies to alleviate nausea, insomnia, muscle pain, and post-traumatic stress syndrome. CBD is also the active ingredient in a seizure medication recently approved by the US Food and Drug Administration.

According to Savage CEO Chris Wheeler, "Hemp may be flying under the radar for the mainstream consumer right now, but we have seen massive growth over the last few months and we expect huge growth as it spreads into health stores and international markets. That's why we're excited about our full spectrum of hemp extract products like capsules, tinctures, infused edibles, lotions, salves, vape oils, and pre-filled vape cartridges, all of which come in a variety of size formats and flavors."

Because Savage has positioned itself so strongly in the hemp market back in late 2015, leaders from other industries are coming to them to manufacturer their hemp infused products. Savage is also very recognizable as it is in most major distribution channels in the vape and tobacco space. Savage is quickly becoming the go to company for all hemp products.

All Savage Hemp products have a certificate of analysis from SC labs whose team of chemists, microbiologists, and quality control experts have developed the industry's first testing standards. Savage employs SC Labs to test all products their content.
