

An Innovative, New Treatment Method for Infidelity: Systematic Affair Recovery Therapy (SART)

Award-winning Marriage Counselor and Infidelity Recovery Expert develops a new counseling method for treating infidelity.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, April 4, 2019

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Systematic Affair Recovery Therapy was developed by Dr. Talal H. Alsaleem, PsyD, LMFT to provide counselors of all levels with a strategic and adaptive treatment method for helping couples heal from the trauma of sexual and emotional affairs.

Infidelity is a prevalent relationship problem that impacts a large segment of the population. A recent study published in the Journal of Marital and Family Therapy states that in 41% of marriages, one or both spouses admit to infidelity, either sexual or emotional. That same study also states that 74% of men and 68% of women say that they would have an affair if they knew they would never get caught. Infidelity is also considered one of the most difficult presenting problems for counselors, and many clinicians have not received specialized training in the treatment of infidelity.

The trauma of infidelity doesn't have to define the rest of your life. The wounds of betrayal can be a catalyst for long-awaited change.”

"Working with couples in crisis can be overwhelming for new and seasoned clinicians, especially when considering the extreme emotional distress and feelings of hopelessness about the future of the relationship. The main reason behind developing this treatment method is to give counselors the tools they need to treat such a prevalent and devastating problem," says Dr. Alsaleem.
