

North America The Largest Region In The Pharmaceutical Drugs Market

Western Europe was the third largest region in the pharmaceutical drugs market, accounting for 19.4%, followed by South America at 8.6%, Eastern Europe at 6.5%.

LONDON, GREATER LONDON, UK, April 5, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- North America was the largest region in the pharmaceutical drugs market in 2017, accounting for more than $340 billion or above 36% of the global pharmaceutical drugs market. The pharmaceutical drugs market is primarily driven by the presence of an advanced healthcare system, high healthcare awareness, access to high value drugs, advances in pharmaceutical research and development, high per capita expenditure on healthcare and high GDP of the region.

Asia-Pacific was the second largest region accounting for $200.8 billion or 21.5% of the market. This market size can be attributed to factors such as large population base, government initiatives supporting healthcare sector, availability of affordable generic drugs, initiatives promoting healthcare insurance, short duration for the drug approval process, aging population and high prevalence of chronic diseases. Western Europe was the third largest region in the pharmaceutical drugs market, accounting for 19.4%, followed by South America at 8.6%, Eastern Europe at 6.5%, the Middle East, and Africa.
