6 Reasons To Celebrate Spring Break in Costa Rica

Best Vacation Ever. Customer service was excellent and Costa Rica itself was beautiful. Jaco Royale was a good choice and recommend to everyone. Our concierges Jimena and Veronica were the best.”

1. It’s as green as can be.

The first thing that strikes you on your Costa Rica Spring Break is the lush greenery – a sight for sore eyes, especially if you’re landing from a city with a fast-shrinking tree cover. It is home to 5% of the earth’s total stock of biodiversity – which is a lot, as you’ll soon discover once you set foot in this country.

A large part of this Latin American enclave consists of protected land divided into biological reserves, wildlife refuges, and national parks, all of which are central to its conservation efforts. The Monteverde Cloud Forest Reserve, Carara National Park, and Corcovado National Park (named by National Geographic as the most biologically intense place on earth) are some examples. Trills of birds fill the air in these places and the forest floor teems with charming wildlife.

Another distinct natural feature is the volcano. Arenal Volcano, the most imposing of them all, Irazu Volcano, partially shrouded in clouds, and their surrounding craters are geological wonders hikers love to visit for an out-of-the-world experience.

2. You get the ultimate beach vacation.

If your friends aren’t already green with envy at your Insta pictures with Costa Rica’s misty cloud forests or the Capuchins in the backdrop, they will go practically wild at your beach shots. With numerous gorgeous beaches and all the quintessential elements of a perfect beach vacation thrown into the pictures (surfing, paddleboarding, snorkeling, or just tanning yourself under the tropical sun), you can't help hogging all the attention on social media.

Costa Rica is a surfer's paradise where both experts and novices turn up to flaunt and practise their moves. And in case you are wet behind the ears in surfing, don't just sit and fret on the beach. There are trainers at hand who can give you quick lessons and get you started in a jiffy. Once you do, you'll keep going back for more.

The best thing we love about the beaches in Costa Rica is that they are not all crammed with people as they are in Miami or Panama City closer home. You won't be tripping over people or their surfboards because there is always some other beach you can get away to, based on the levels of human presence you can put up with.

3. It's more like the US but better than the US.

The weather will be a bracing 25C when you land. Although temperatures can vary throughout the country depending on the altitude, a beaming sun, and the soothing greenery will be a welcome break from the long and biting winter you had back home.

Apart from the obvious contrast you find in the low rises, rolling mountains, and swirling greenery, Costa Rica will feel like a lot like home because of the sheer number of Americans living or gallivanting here. You will find sports bars where American football matches are watched and cheered as avidly as back home.

However, this doesn't mean you can't experience the local culture or enjoy the delightful company of Ticos on your Costa Rica spring break. . Far from it. There are numerous occasions where you get to meet them and interact with them. Just remember to greet them with a Pura Vida rather than a hello because in Costa Rica it is a tradition to wish everyone a good life.

4. The vacation rentals are drop-dead gorgeous.

The Condos and Villas in Costa Rica will blow your mind with their sheer variety. You will be spoilt for choice if you start looking for properties with a specific checklist in mind. Ocean, mountain, forest views from your bedrooms?

5. It's the ultimate place to party.

Agreed, you are not a tree hugger on a mission to save the planet nor are you seeking nirvana on your Costa Rica Spring Break. You just wanna have fun. Well, you've still come to the right place, because COSTA RICA IS PARTY CENTRAL. It's a famous bachelor party destination, but since you are not bachelor party material yet, let's focus on the general party scene here.

In Jaco, the bars stay open into the wee hours of the morning with DJs rocking the night. There is plenty of flavorsome food and drinks to keep you going till you call it a night. Whether you are binge-drinking or just exploring the native flavors, try the local brew – the Guaro. Made from sugarcane, it comes at a price tad lower than your regular stuff but tastes just as good.

6. You will have scads of fun and adventure.

Explore Costa Rica on foot, in a boat, on ATV, or even a zip line! For instance, to appreciate the Monteverde Cloud Forests, you need to literally get on top of it and ziplining is the way to do it. Like modern-day Tarzan, you will swing from tree to tree, safely harnessed to a zipline. You will get a bird's eye view of everything, including the birds flying below you.

Want one-of-the-kind Costa Rica spring break party? Hire a party boat and head off to the ocean. You can have half-day to full-day parties with DJ music and all the high-jinks of a spring break party on these top-notch boats. Another adventure you'd hate to miss is the trip to Tortuga Island, home to Jack Sparrows of yore.
