

All but one of the 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence will headline University Archives' May 15th auction

Anyone looking to start, add to or complete their collection of signers of the Declaration of Independence will have that chance in the online-only auction.

WESTPORT, CONN., UNITED STATES, April 11, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Anyone looking to start, add to or complete their collection of signers of the Declaration of Independence will have that opportunity in University Archives' next online-only auction, set for Wednesday, May 15th, starting at 10:30 am Eastern time. All but one of the Declaration's 56 signers will be offered as individual lots – not as a set – many for the first time.

“Rarely do you see a nearly complete set of Declaration signers come up for bid, especially as single lots,” said John Reznikoff, president of University Archives. “Some of these signatures have been off the market for a hundred years. This is a rare opportunity for collectors to own a piece of American history, or more than one piece if they’re filling in spaces in their collections.”

All but one of the 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence will be offered as individual lots in University Archives' online auction slated for Wednesday, May 15th.

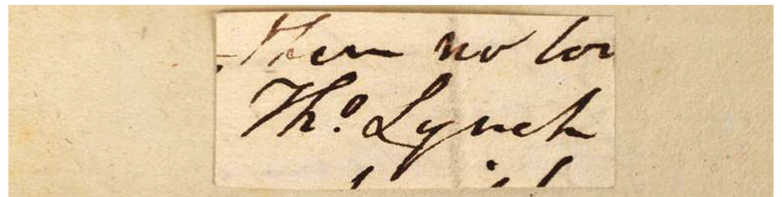

Mr. Reznikoff is no stranger to Declaration signers. Twice before he's sold several complete ones for well over one million dollars. “That was one of the finest sets in existence,” he remarked, “and the buyer was more than happy to pay that much.” Reznikoff added he's probably sold more Declaration signer material than any other auction house or dealer alive.

Button Gwinnett – the only signer not in the auction – was a British-born American Founding Father and Georgia's representative to the Continental Congress. He also served briefly as Georgia's provisional president. The reason his signature is so rare is that he was killed in a duel by rival Lachlan McIntosh following a dispute after a failed invasion of East Florida, in 1777.

But the rest of the signers – from John Hancock to John Adams to Benjamin Franklin to Samuel Adams to George Wythe – are all in the sale, to include George Taylor (Opening Bid: $8,500); Arthur Middleton (OB: $7,000); Thomas Lynch (OB: $5,000); and Francis Lightfoot Lee (OB: $3,000). The Declaration announced and explained the United States' separation from England.

Live bidding for the auction will be posted by April 25th. That's when the full catalog will be available for view, at www.UniversityArchives.com. As with all University Archives auctions, it will be loaded with rare, highly collectible autographed documents, manuscripts, books, photos and relics. Internet bidding will also be available via Invaluable.com and LiveAuctioneers.com.

In addition to the Declaration signers, other noteworthy consignments include four items signed by Abraham Lincoln and two items signed by George Washington (with possibly more of each on the way); a large aviation archive; a letter written and signed by Founding Father and political theorist Thomas Paine; plus the usual smattering of scarce, curated and highly collectible items.

Thomas Lynch Opening Bid: $5,000

Signature of Thomas Lynch (1749-1779), a signer of the Declaration of Independence as a representative of South Carolina (Opening Bid: $5,000). He signed because his father was too ill.

Our reputation is rock-solid worldwide and has been earned over a period of four decades. People respect us globally.”
