The 30-minute feature ended in a standing ovation for Darren Tessitore who was in the audience along with his 13-year-old daughter Sandra, who also played a part in her father's drug-free work.

Darren is so dedicated to go so far to figure out how to get the materials out. Some people just do a little and give up. It is impressive to see someone so driven.”

Christie Wood,

The mesmerizing video showed how Tessitore, recognizing that he couldn't do it alone, reached out to other like-minded people who have the means of reaching thousands but didn't have the effective tools Tessitore has to educate youth and adults on the truth about drugs. Through the FDFW's Truth About Drugs booklets, documentary and educators kit, Tessitore has now reached over 3 million people in 13 states across the US.

Christie Wood who is visiting relatives in Clearwater decided to attend the screening as she has been watching the Scientology network at home. She said, "These episodes are so well done. You have to cry when you watch it. You can't help but hear the hooting and hollering with everyone here in the auditorium and not feel like crying. Darren is so dedicated to go so far to figure out how to get the materials out. Some people just do a little and give up. It is impressive to see someone so driven. The production was very beautifully made."

After the showing, Darren took up several questions from the crowd to brief them more on the Truth About Drugs campaign and how they can help. There were questions such as, "How do I contact a school about the Truth About Drugs?" Darren answered the questions making it real how it is easy it is to help and get involved and then he gave his email: darrent@drugfreeworld.org.
