The International Maintenance Conference (IMC),
December 9-12, 2019

Participating in the Uptime Awards evaluation process brings many benefits. Organizations report that the process can help create an opportunity for external assessment and comparison, improve external communication and program detail reporting, and define the business cases for a sustainable program. It fosters teamwork and builds acknowledgement of all stakeholder contributions, generates internal recognition and program validation, and allows organizations to contribute to an emerging body of knowledge for effective asset management and maintenance reliability best practices. Sharing program details and best practices with the global maintenance reliability community also creates opportunities for external knowledge sharing and benchmarking relationships.

Past winners of the Uptime Awards include Southern Gardens Citrus, Jacobs NASA, Mercedes-Benz U.S. International, Cintas, Bristol-Myers Squibb, Malaysia Airports, Nova Scotia Power, and CBRE.

The deadline for submission of entries is May 15, 2019. Initial interviews will take place in June; top nominees will be interviewed in July. Winners will be notified on August 31, 2019. The Uptime Awards judging panel includes Terrence O'Hanlon, CEO and Publisher, Reliabilityweb.com and Uptime Magazine, Dave Reiber, Senior Reliability Leader, Reliabilityweb.com, and Jeff Smith, Senior Reliability Leader, Reliabilityweb.com.

Winners will be invited to participate in the Uptime Awards Ceremony, held at the International Maintenance Conference (IMC), December 9-12, 2019, on Marco Island, Florida. Winners will also receive a 45-minute presentation of their program at IMC, as well as an article in Uptime Magazine featuring their program.
